Saint Michael School Scores Big with Touchdowns for Technology

School to Receive One Computer for Every Touchdown Scored by the New England Patriots

November 1, 2010 – Saint Michael School of North Andover scored big by winning the Touchdowns for Technology giveaway sponsored by Kaspersky Labs. The school will receive four computers, one for each touchdown scored by the New England Patriots during the game on October 31st against the Minnesota Vikings.

Julie Walsh, a parent from Saint Michael School, registered online for the opportunity to win the Touchdowns for Technology drawing. Walsh was notified that her name was drawn and the school of her choice, Saint Michael School, would receive one Dell computer with monitor, operating system and software from Kaspersky Labs for every touchdown scored by the Patriots.

“I’m thrilled that we have been selected,” said Walsh. “Saint Michael School works hard to provide students with current technology. New computers will have a major impact on our children’s learning. We are extremely thankful for the opportunity.”

Sponsored by Kaspersky Labs, Touchdowns for Technology brings together technology, education and sports, and encourages communities to join together to win computers for their schools. The parents and staff of Saint Michael School banded together to encourage as many families as possible to register, in hopes of being selected.

Saint Michael School Principal, Susan Gosselin added, "We asked all families and parishioners to pray to the Patron Saint of athletics (we don't think there is a Patron Saint of football) so we could earn many computers for our school. This is an amazing gift that will have a significant impact on the school."
